POSTAL PECCADILLOES. Past, Present, and Future of Nebraska. OMAHA, July 20.

"Money Talks"-Failure of an EDITOR OMAHA BEE: Attempt to Buy Bye off.

Having spent over four monthssince about the first of March-in various parts of Eastern Nebraska, Furious Furay Would Have I would like to say a few things in Liked long ago to Have your widely circulated paper, about Said, "Good-Bye, the past, present and future of this Mr. Bye."

promising state.

The publication in the BEE of Saturday of the charges against Postmaster Yost caused considerable talk in the city. The investigation will probably take place this week, as Special Agent Hawley is expected here to-day for that purpose. The members of the postal ring are greatly agitated over the matter, and are doing everything to turn public opinion in their favor. In fact they are publicly attempting to good-naturedly laugh the affair down, while on the other side, on the sly, they are vigorously vice, and then, after intimidation bait for the witnesses to bite at. But thus far, both schemes have not panned out worth a cent. In substantiation of these statements, we will cite the case of F. R. Bye, the postal clerk who preferred the charges against Yost. They have the State from Kansas to the Nio tried to frighten him with threats of dismissal and of preferring charges against him. It was reported also lars. Yesterday we accordingly interviewed Bye, and got his own statement which speaks for itself. According to his statement he was there for his health, and who is approached by a certain party, a gentleman of considerable notoriety as being deeply interested in "noble charities." This was about a week

> "I was approached," says Mr. Bye, "by an offer of money for a promise that I would withdraw my proceedings and charges and take my transfer and go out of town."

"I was told I was going into this thing, and would make nothing by it, and was informed that money

The party, according to Bye, then used substantially the following language to him : "Now here, you can make some money out of this, If you go into this you will prohably remove Yost and Furay from the service, but if you do not you can make nothing. You have been at parties, and have them make up the money you have lost by them, and you can take a transfer, which has already been offered you, to an eastern road, and can take the money for your pocket." Mr. Bye replied, "If those fellows have sent you to buy me, they have mistaken their man. Both of them together have not got money enough to buy me, although I am not worth

"Well," was the reply, "that's the kind of a man that will suit me. I shall run a business in Kansas in a short time, which will be as honorable and honest as running a postoffice. You're the very kind of a man I want to run it."

"Well," said Bye, "if I couldn't run it any more honestly than the postoffice has been run, then I don't want to run it; but if you have got an honest and square business, I am your man."

The above statement Mr. Bye mail agent Furay, he says:

Furay said, 'Bye, you have got to shut your mouth in regard to Yost and myself, This talking on the street we will not have; you are a poor man, and we do not want to remove you from the serving. Your family has already saved you in your position. Now I tell you for your own good, that Senator Hitchcock and Yost have withdrawn from your endorsement, also Crounse, who was in a bad humor because you put your papers on file for a special's commission. Mr. Crounse is a great friend of mine, and will do anything for me.' " "Now Mr. Furay," Bye replied I do not know anything in regard to these men withdrawing from my endorsement. Probably they have, but I do not know why. I have said nothing but what I can prove. In regard to the mail contract and other charges against Yost, I can sustain them all. And as for yourself, there are some reports about you. It is reported you were before the U. S. Grand Jury in behalf of Pattee, and that you swore you believed him to be an honest

Apply at Office of Great Western Land Agency, 130 & 132 Farnham street. W ANTED-A good girl in family of three-1920th I was first here in 1856, and have been at intervals many times since.

When I first saw Omaha it was a mere viliage of about 500 inhabitants, and all the hills and valleys westward, were one great wild waste f grass, beasts and savages. In 1859 I was here again and went up the Platte valley some distance. Here and there on the old military road was a ranche for the accommo-dation of the immense number then going to the western mines. Fremont was then only a clump of three or four log capins.

At that time the Platte valley was Nebraska. It was ascertained that grain would grow and ripen, that meadow grass was plenty and that wood and water on the Platte river would supply a few inhabi-tants. None had yet ventured back from the river. The lands on the bluffs were considered absolutely worthless. Everybody said that they would never be occupied or cultivated. They would do for wild animals and Indians, nothing else. Now, what do we see? Omaha is city of 20,000 inhabitants, with a property value of $20,000,000. The biuffs and table lands for 200 miles west of the Missouri, clear across brara, are dotted all over with little frame houses, with fields of corn. oats, barley and flax, with herds of cattle, and with blocks and belts of fresh breaking.

This one fact settles the destiny of Nebraska. The Platte valley is no longer Nebraska. The whole State is cut by numerous little rivers and creeks with rich valleys from half a mile to five miles wide. These valleys are some better for corn and hay, but it is now plain that the table lands, all things considered, are nearly if not entirely equal to the bottoms. There is no question any longer about the whole of Eastern Nebraska, bluffs and all, being a fine farming and grazing country. Nebraska seems to be taking a fresh start this year. From the best evidence I can get, no less than 80,-000 souls will be added to her population this year, and as many acres of sod will be turned over in 1874 as in all former years put together, Every kind of small grain crop is already secure appliest all chances, and the corn bids fair. There will be abundance of everything for the present inhabitants and for the thousands that will flock here before winter. The soil and surface of Nebraska are such as to make farming easy. I have seen the whole process this year, from early spring plowing, sowing and planting to barley and wheat harvest. The land stands an expense in going to Washington any kind of weather and is easy on twice, and it has cost you $500. As machinery. One thing I would esa friend, if you say it, I'll see those pecially notice. In every county there is plenty of water power mills and factories.

The best powers are on the smallest streams—narrow, deep, and rapid, with light banks, and are fed by streams, so as never to fail. In any county, there is at least one such stream, on which a fifteen feet head can be raised, without overflowing an acre of land out of the banks, and with force enough the year around, to run three pairs of burs day and night. What is next wanted is the improvement of these water powers, in the erection of flour mills, oil mills, and wool mills, for Nebraska will be hard to beat for wheat, flax and wool. These should be manufactured at home, and not so much sentabroad. The erection of factories would greatly increase the amount and variety of labor, bring capital from the East, and retain much more of the earnings of the people within the I predict a grand future for Nebraska as a farming country. And it is the farm that makes the world. All wealth comes out of the ground leave your fair State, Mr. Editor. greatly pleased, and with hopes of hereafter contributing my mite to the wonderful progress of a State, which in an agricultural respect, i to stand among the first in the WALTER CRAIG.
